Fresh Fear: An Anthology Of Macabre Horror

Synopsis

FRESH FEAR: An Anthology of Macabre Horror* is a collection of horror from some of the genre's best writers of dark fiction. With over 450 pages of quality dark fiction, Fresh Fear is packed with stories written by both masters and up-and-coming maestros of the horror genre, including Ramsey Campbell, JF Gonzales, Jack Dann, Charlee Jacob, Robert Dunbar, Adam Millard, Christine Morgan and BillieSue Mosiman to name a few. Tales steeped in psychological horror sit alongside visions of strange worlds and fantastical landscapes drenched in blood. Prepare yourself for 28 tales of fear-inducing horror from some of today's best authors of dark fiction. 'Quiet horror' sits comfortably next to more visceral portrayals of the monsters that lurk deep within the human heart. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, famously once said, "where there is no imagination there is no horror" - the horror expressed by the authors in Fresh Fear show that imagination is indeed tantamount to excellent story-telling.

Customer Reviews

Amazing anthology, chocked full of tales from some of horror's best writers. Legendary names like Ramsey Campbell to Billie Sue Mosiman lay side by side with lesser known, but no less impressive, authors like J.F. Gonzalez and Tim Jones. A must read for any horror fan.

This book was a good read; and used some really novel ideas to tell their story. Even the ones that appear formulaic had a twist or a variation that kept me reading.

I'd give 3.5 stars if that was an option. There were only a few stories I didn't really enjoy. In this case...the price was right.

Fresh Fear, the smell of quick and sudden sweat inspired by the passion of the hunter, the fresh fear underlying the excitement, the smell that alerts you to incipient danger. You may struggle to break free but the pen strokes slash across the page before your eyes, creating a trap for your imagination. Which way do you run? There is no escape; indeed, you will find yourself bound by these macabre tales. This book made me uneasy; it's just too big and too good. Beginning with a substantive introduction by W.J. Rinehan, the anthology is 450 pages in all, twenty-eight tales from horror's heaviest hitters, names like Scythe meic Beorh, Robert Dunbar, Lily Childs, Lincoln Crisler, Thomas Erb, Carole Gill, Lindsey Beth Goddard, K Trap Jones, James Ward Kirk, Shaun Meeks, Christine Morgan, Billie Sue Mosiman, Chantal Noordeloos, Don Noble, WH

Pugmire, Jack Dann, Brandon Ford, JF Gonzalez, Dane Hatchell, Charlee Jacob, Tim Jones, Roy C. Booth, Axel Kohagen, Shane McKenzie, Adam Millard, William Todd Rose, EA Irwin, Anna Taborska--and did I say Ramsey Campbell, seriously, Ramsey Campbell. I can't think of any other anthology that I've reviewed where I had to name every author in the book because there were no low points. Not to say that I wasn't disappointed, disappointed that the editor, William Cook, didn't slip one of his own dark thrillers into the mix. I'm always looking for a new story by William Cook. This anthology proves he's not only a master of psychological thrillers and horror fiction, he can also edit an anthology that is so big and beautiful it's frightening. A few of my favorite stories "Of course I must start with J.F. Gonzalez, Love Hurts, the topic is so edgy I almost felt guilty reading it but, like many of the stories in Fresh Fear, it was so beautifully written the horror crept up on me easy; Charlee Jacob, Locked Inside the Buzzword Box, because I love clever surreal stories that tangle meaning and horror; W.H. Pugmire in Darkness Dancing in Your Eyes played on my fear of mirrors delightfully, this is a trip I will take again for the chills; James Ward Kirk's Block is again a very clever story which is so well written the horrors kind of seem normal, until you think about it; Shaun Meeks contributed a stand out story in Perfection Through Silence, and I love Billie Sue Mosiman's voice in Verboten. I'd be hard put to choose a favorite. But it would be my pleasure to give Fresh Fear another read and see what my favorites are this time.

A real different take on horror short stories...Not for the faint of heart.

Good collection of short stories here. There are a few that kind of stayed with me: Love Hurts, Spencer Weaver Gets Rebooted, and probably my favorite of the bunch, Psych by D.F. Noble.

These stories knocked my socks off (literally) These stories were to die for. My favorites were "Camps", "out of the Dark" and "Spencer Weaver Gets Rebooted"!

Seriously amazing! You won't be sorry if you get this anthology...so many great stories I just can't pick a favourite. Do yourself a favour and get this book!
