Judith Stanford is Professor of English at Rivier College in Nashua, New Hampshire, where, for the past fifteen years, she has taught courses in literature and writing. She has also taught at Cape Cod Community College, Merrimack College (North Andover, Massachusetts) and the University of California at Santa Barbara. She received the B.A. degree from Colby College (Waterville, Maine) and both the M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of California at Santa Barbara. Professor Stanford's books include Connections, now in its third edition, Developing Connections, now in its second edition, and Guidelines for Writers, all published by McGraw-Hill.

The stories and short poems are really interesting. This book is older but I love it. It gives it a classic feeling. This is a great book to read.

Arrived much earlier than expected. However the description was too vague. I would have liked a more specific description on the condition so I would have a clear understanding of what I was purchasing.

This book is huge, but it has a lot of great readings and a lot of great questions to get your mind going. I would definitely recommend it to people interested in literature. I don't regret that I had to buy this book for class.

This book goes to explain the various parts of literature and gives various examples along with many different types of readings.

The textbook arrived in a timely fashion. The stories in this textbook are very interesting. The stories are a good read for all ages.

i am very pleased with my order product was label in good condition but in my eyes it was perfect no markings the pages weren't even bent. It also took Just little over a week to be shipped to me. Will use again thank you.

Still in tact and is easy to use and take to school. I recommend it to those who need it.

I got my book and it was like new. It took them about 2 weeks to send it to my house though. I was already wondering if they forgot about me.
